I. CONCLUSION

A moderately large number of incidents have been reported involving permethrin. The majority of incidents were low to moderate severity and four incidents resulted in death. Based on the number of incidents reported, and the effects noted in the incidents, the evaluation warrants further analysis in the preliminary risk assessment phase of registration review.

II. ACTION REQUESTED

This review is intended to fulfill our requirement to docket summaries of incident data that were reported to the Agency, as well as to ensure human incident data, and the Agricultural Health Study (AHS) are part of the problem formulation phase of registration review. Reports of adverse health effects allegedly due to a specific pesticide exposure (i.e., an “incident”) are largely self-reported and therefore, generally speaking, neither exposure to a pesticide or reported symptom (or the connection between the two) is validated. Typically, causation cannot be determined based on incident data. However, incident information can be an important feedback loop to the Agency – incidents of severe outcome, or a suggested pattern or trend among less severe incidents can signal the Agency to further investigate a particular chemical or product. Observational epidemiology studies relate the risk of disease, e.g., cancer, and exposure to an agent such as a pesticide product in the general population or specific sub-groups like pesticide applicators.

III. BACKGROUND

For this evaluation, the OPP Incident Data System (IDS) was utilized for pesticide incident data on the active ingredient permethrin (PC Code 109701). The purpose of the database search is to identify potential patterns on the frequency and severity of the health effects attributed to permethrin exposure. The IDS includes reports of alleged human health incidents from various sources, including mandatory Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA) Section 6 (a) (2) reports from registrants, other federal and state health and environmental agencies and individual consumers. Since 1992, OPP compiles these reports in IDS. IDS contain reports from across the U.S. and most incidents have all relevant product information recorded. Reports submitted to the IDS represent anecdotal reports or allegations only, unless otherwise stated in the report. The AHS is a high quality, prospective epidemiology study evaluating the link between pesticide use and various health outcomes including cancer. The AHS includes private and commercial pesticide applicators and their spouses. If there are AHS findings relevant to a particular pesticide going through registration review, the Agency will ensure they are considered in the problem formulation/scoping phase of the process and, if appropriate, fully reviewed in the risk assessment phase of the process. The AHS includes information on use of 50 different pesticide active ingredients commonly used in agriculture.

IV. DISCUSSION

Incident Data System

IDS records incidents resulting in higher severity outcomes in more detail, in a module called the Main IDS module. This system stores incident data for death, major and moderate incidents, and it includes more details about the location, date and nature of the incident. Main IDS incidents involving only one pesticide are considered to provide more certain information about the potential effects of exposure from the pesticide, and therefore these incidents are listed in the Appendix 1. Additionally, since higher severity incidents are generally of greater concern, incidents involving death and major outcomes include a narrative summary in Appendix 1. The less severe human incidents (minor, unknown or no effects outcomes) are reported by registrants as counts called aggregate summaries and are recorded in separate module called Aggregate IDS.

In the Aggregate IDS, from January 1, 2002 to February, 2011, there were 9992 incidents involving permethrin. Because it falls within the categories reported as counts (which includes minor, unknown or no effects), there is no unique report that provides details about the incident and single chemical incidents are not distinguished from multiple chemical incidents; however, a high frequency of incidents indicates there is a high potential for exposure and vice versa. For permethrin, there appears to be a high potential for exposure.

For the Main IDS, from January 1, 2002, to February 1, 2011, there are 2478 cases reported that involve the active ingredient permethrin. Of these 2478 cases, there are 432 cases reported for single chemical permethrin only in the database. There were 5 deaths (HA) and 15 HBs (Human Majors) which are summarized in Appendix 1. Most of the deaths were due to misuse and unintentional exposure to permethrin. One of them was a homicide case; permethrin was mixed in milk and given to a 7 year old female. Another death was a 10 month old male who developed difficulty breathing and died at the hospital after the exposure to several cans of foggers used by his mother inside her trailer. The third case was an 86 year old male who slept in a bed treated with permethrin, detailed information regarding symptoms and the amount of permethrin used in his bed was not available. The fourth case was a 40 year old male, his face was exposed to the product when the product exploded out from the top of the container after it was hooked up to the garden hose; he died one week after this incident. The fifth case was a 2 month old child who tested positive for cocaine in blood. It was not determined if the cause of death was from exposure to permethrin or cocaine. Most of the HBs (Human Majors) were exposed to the product while using it without protective clothing, and were unaware of the adverse effects of permethrin. They developed respiratory symptoms such as coughing, shortness of breath; neurological symptoms such as muscle spasm, weakness, dizziness and eye problems such as eye irritation and corneal burns.

Figure 1: represents the number of permethrin only incidents over time. The number of incidents appears to be decreasing over time.

AHS Studies

The AHS is an epidemiology investigation (prospective cohort study) of health effects experienced by pesticide applicators in the states of Iowa and North Carolina. A main strength of the study is the ability to determine exposure to pesticides before cancer cases are diagnosed which distinguishes this study from other types of epidemiological investigations. Since its inception in 1993, there have been over 100 publications from this epidemiologic research study. Within the last three years, researchers with the Agricultural Health Study (AHS) have produced several investigations of both cancer and non-cancer outcomes associated with use of permethrin on both livestock and crops (Rusiecki et al. 2008; Hoppin et al. 2008; Slager et al. 2010; and, Koutros 2010). A summary of these findings is provided herein.

In a prospective cohort analysis, AHS investigators compared the rates of various anatomical cancer sites between those who did and those who did not report use of permethrin during their working lifetime as pesticide applicators. Pesticide exposure was collected via self-administered questionnaire which has subsequently been illustrated to result in reliable and valid estimates of lifetime pesticide exposure (Blair 2002, Hoppin 2002). Cancer incidence (the identification of new cancer cases within the AHS cohort which occurred after participants were enrolled in the study) was ascertained through record linkage with the respective state cancer registries. Relevant lifestyle (e.g., smoking) and demographic information was also collected and utilized in the multi-variable statistical analysis performed. This study included 49,093 pesticide applicators. Using various exposure metrics, exposure categories and sensitivity analyses using 2 different reference groups, researchers did not observe associations between permethrin use and all malignancies combined or for melanoma, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, leukemia, or cancers of the colon, rectum, lung or prostate. Using the total number of permethrin lifetime exposure days among all cancer cases divided into tertiles, researchers did find elevated and statistically significant risks for multiple myeloma when comparing the highest exposure tertile to those who reported no use of permethrin (rate ratio (RR) 5.01, 95% confidence interval (CI) 2.41, 10.42), a positive, monotonic exposure-response relation was also observed (p for linear trend <0.01). Rusiecki et al. caution, however, that these results are based upon a small number of permethrin exposed cases ($n=15$), and they note that these findings require replication before a causal relation can be postulated.

Previously, AHS authors observed a link between prostate cancer and use of permethrin however, only among men with a family history (first degree relative) of prostate cancer (odds ratio (OR) 2.38 95% confidence interval (95% CI) 1.34, 4.25, p for interaction 0.02) (Alavanja 2003). However, as noted above, in the more recent cohort analysis (Rusiecki 2008), authors did not observe strong evidence in support of a link among those with a family history of prostate cancer (RR 1.19, 95% CI, 0.82-1.3). In a recent evaluation of possible gene by environment interactions performed within the same population of men (i.e., the AHS), there is some suggestion permethrin use may modify (or change) the magnitude of the association between certain genetic variations along the 8q24 region of the genome and the risk of prostate cancer (Koutros et al., 2010). The genomic region 8q24 has been shown to be associated with prostate cancer independently across several epidemiologic investigations. While this finding requires replication before we can know with greater certainty whether permethrin is associated with this cancer among those with certain genetic variations, the results suggest that a gene by environment interaction could be statistically and biologically possible. However, given the large number of statistical comparisons made in this interaction analysis authors suggest caution in the interpretation of these findings as the possibility of false positive results is high.

In two investigations of respiratory health among men and women in the AHS, researchers reported both elevated risks of rhinitis (Slager 2010) and also atopic asthma (Hoppin 2008) among women only in association with permethrin use. In multi-variable adjusted analysis which included adjustment for other farm-related exposures that could influence respiratory outcomes (e.g., hay and dust), researchers reported 2-fold increased odds of non-atopic asthma among women who used permethrin on crops (odds ratio (OR) 2.19 (95% confidence interval, 95% CI) 1.33, 3.61) (Hoppin et al. 2008). In a separate study of current rhinitis (runny nose), which can be an indicator for asthma and other respiratory responses, authors reported significant associations with use of permethrin on animals and both current rhinitis ($p<0.05$), and the number of episodes (>13) of rhinitis in a year (OR 1.13 (95% CI 1.03, 1.23), $p<0.005$) (Slager et al. 2010). In this latter study, authors could not completely exclude the role of exposure typical of animal husbandry as a potential explanation for the results. Both of these investigations of respiratory health in connection with permethrin use are hypothesis-generating in nature, and additional research is necessary to clarify potential biological mechanisms, to replicate the findings in other populations, and with larger sample sizes to enhance statistical power.

The AHS is a strong study which continues to provide EPA useful information to consider in risk assessment and characterization. The statistical association between multiple myeloma and permethrin use is elevated, and statistically significant, however the study is also limited by the small number of exposed multiple myeloma cases, and the lack of an a priori hypothesis regarding the link (Rusiecki et al. 2008). These findings warrant further investigation. The observation of potential gene by environment interaction between genetic variations in the genomic area 8q24 and permethrin with prostate cancer is somewhat suggestive, however replication in other cohorts is needed, and mechanisms underlying the possible biological interaction between these genetic variants and permethrin would aid causal interpretation. Initial research concerning the potential respiratory effects of permethrin use on both animal and crops also require replication, including the isolation of the effect independent of other farm-related animal exposures as a potential explanation for the findings. EPA will monitor this literature and include in future risk assessments, when appropriate.

V. RESULTS

From February 2002-February 2011, a moderately large number of incidents have been reported involving permethrin. The majority of incidents were low to moderate severity and 5 incidents resulted in death. Based on the number of incidents reported, and the effects noted in the incidents, the evaluation warrants further analysis in the preliminary risk assessment phase of registration review. This further analysis will include reviewing other incident data from other sources (such as, SENSOR and PCC) as well as cases studies and medical literature search on human health effects of permethrin.

Incident Number	Incident Date	Product Name	Registration Number	City	State	Exposure Type*	Incident Description
012630	001 01-Feb-02	SPECTRACIDE BRAND BUG STOP CONCENTRATE	00968800084 008845	YAKIMA	WA	HA	A 2 month old male died one week after the baseboards in his apartment were sprayed with diluted product (1:5). It was reported that the family came back to the apartment 8 hours after the spraying was done. However, drug testing was required at death, and the infant tested positive for cocaine.
014595	001 03-Sep-03	ATROBAN 42.5% EC	00077300060	CHAPEL HILL	NC	HA	A 7 year old female was found dead in bed. A caregiver admitted that 6 tablespoons of product was mixed with milk and gave to the child. The report also mentioned that the milk bottle was found under the pillow.
016291	001 07-Jun-05	RID HOME LICE CONTROL SPRAY	07304900301 073470	BILOXI	MS	HA	An 86 year old male slept in a bed treated with product. He woke up in the middle of night complaining of chills for which he sought treatment at an emergency room. Later a nurse reported to his friend that he had died. No further information.
13579	1 16-Jun-02	BUG-B-GON MULTI-PURPOSE INSECT KILLER SPRAY READY SPRAY (PERMETHRIN CO	00102101758 000239		CA	HA	A 40 year old male was exposed to the product in face when the product was exploded out the top of the container after it was hooked up to the garden hose. He developed ocular burn, swollen eyes, blurred vision and nausea about 12 hrs after the incident. He also complained of runny nose, unable to sleep and loss of appetite because of nausea. About one week after the incident his family informed the product company that he passed away.

021412	001	01-Nov-09	BENGAL ROACH & FLEA FOGGER (UNCERTAIN IF USED)	06854300021	WILLIAMSTON	SC	HA	A 10 month old male developed difficulty in breathing and died at the hospital after his mother used several cans of foggers inside her trailer. It was also reported that there was a grease fire the night before he was taken to the hospital.
012760	008	27-Jan-02	SPECTRACIDE BRAND BUG STOP INDOOR & OUTDOOR HOME INSECT CONTROL	00968800085008845	CASPER	WY	HB	A 35 year old female was exposed to the product while cleaning up the spill at work. She developed coughing and shortness of breath; received treatment from the doctor and scheduled for pulmonary function test. It was mentioned that symptoms lasted more than 3 months.
014288	005	28-Apr-03	PROZAP INSECTRIX X CONCENTRATE	00102101736036208		CA	HB	A 46 year old male reported that he inhaled product accidentally and developed sharp abdominal pain, vomiting and anorexia. He received treatment from the physician; also underwent colonoscopy, and endoscopy, biopsy result is pending.
014829	001	04-Jan-04	RID HOME LICE CONTROL SPRAY	07304900301073470	FRESH MEADOWS	NY	HB	A 36 yr old female inhaled product fumes & experienced tightness of chest and breathing problems.
18284	1	10-Aug-04	RAID FUMIGATOR FUMIGATING FOGGER	482200278	LA PORT	MN	HB	A 64 year old male was exposed to the fogger and suffered from light-headedness, shortness of breath, and eye irritation. He also reported development of fatty tumors on his forehead, hip and legs. He received treatment from the doctor; chest X-ray and CT scan showed lung nodules.
016373	005	01-Jan-05	SPECTRACIDE TERMINATE TERMITE KILLING CONCENTRATE	00968800149008845	MIAMI	FL	HB	A 71 year old male reported that he used product in the interior of his house along baseboards and cabinets. He developed excessive sweating at night, burning eyes, fever and loss of appetite for about 6 months. He received treatment from his physician and got better.
017502	002	01-Nov-05	SPECTRACIDE BUG STOP MULTI-PURPOSE INSECT CONTROL CONCENTRATE 2	00968800136008845	PITTSBURGH	PA	HB	Adult (18-64) year old female reported that she suffered from stiffness and pain in her hands and arms after using the product once a week for about a year.

017863	153	01-Aug-06	ANT B GON DUST	00102101749 000239	SYRACUSE	NY	HB	Adult male (18-64) year old reported that he suffered from muscle spasm, weakness, headache, nausea, and dizziness after he was exposed to the product applied inside and outside his home.
018364	002	25-Nov-06	ANT-B-GON DUST	00102101749 000239	LANCASTER	PA	HB	An 85 year old female was exposed to the product by dermal, inhalation and in eyes. She developed burning sensation on hands, corneal burns, swollen tongue and stomach ache for days. She received treatment from her physician.
018915	007	01-Aug-07	BUG-B-GON GARDEN & LANDSCAPE RTU INSECT KILLER DUST	02829300126 000239		NY	HB	A 54 year old female developed seizures and twitching of tongue next day after applying the product in the garden with bare hands in a windy day. She believes she had accidentally ingested some of the products. She was taken to the ER for treatment; MRI was done and later referred to the neurologist.
018915	028	01-Jul-07	ANT-B-GON DUST	00102101749 000239		KY	HB	A female senior >65 years sprinkled the product into the ducts in her house to get rid of ants. She developed memory problems, black outs for short periods of time and hypertension (systolic >240 mmHg). She felt better when she was out of her house. She got the ducts cleaned out and got better. She also received treatment from her doctor.
018934	003	28-Jun-07	ASTRO INSECTICIDE	00027903141	WOODLAND PARK	CO	HB	A 51 year old female with a history of porphyria reported that she developed nausea, vomiting, numbness from face to her waist, focal seizures (her arm jerking), and difficulty with balancing. She also reported that her urine urobilinogen level became elevated and got more sensitive to sulpha containing foods (with nausea and vomiting).
021162	001	18-Aug-09	DRAGNET SFR TERMITICIDE/INSECTICIDE	00027903062	UNDERWOOD	WA	HB	A 64 year old female (medical chemist) reported that she was exposed to the product sprayed on her couch and developed pituitary tumor about 9 years ago. She moved back recently and started cleaning the couch and thought that this caused regrowth of her tumor. [None of the studies mentioned that this pesticide can cause pituitary tumor.]

021412	001	01-Nov-09	BENGAL ROACH & FLEA FOGGER (UNCERTAIN IF USED)	06854300021	WILLIAMSTON	SC	HB	A 25 year old female used several cans of fogger inside her trailer and developed difficulty in breathing. She was hospitalized.
022459	001	01-Oct-10	DRAGNET (NON-SPECIFIC)			CA	HB	A (18-64) year old female reported that she suffered from anaphylactic reactions when she was exposed to the product used by her neighbor (about 20 feet away from her). No information regarding medical care was available.
22486	001	01-May-10	RID HOME LICE CONTROL SPRAY	07304900301 073470	PANAMA CITY	FL	HB	A 42 year old female reported that she was using the product for the past 5 months while she was pregnant. At present there are painful, open sores with discharge on her head. She also has itchy rash on her head and shoulders and a cyst behind her ears. She is now three weeks postpartum after the labor was induced prematurely due to abruptio placenta (abnormal separation of placenta prior to birth). However, she reported that the baby is not ill.
